

THE DIANE MORGAN GROUP

FUTURE 4 TEENS

Dr. Latoya Taylor is a temporary limited licensed psychologist with a Doctoral Degree in Clinical Psychology from University of Detroit Mercy. Dr. Taylor provides therapeutic support under the supervision of Dr. Brandi Pritchett-Johnson. Dr. Taylor is a clinician at The Diane Morgan Group, a therapy and consulting firm that specializes in intergenerational family and racial/cultural trauma. The Diane Morgan Group provides therapy/counseling and therapeutic retreats to men, women, college populations, and teenagers. The Diane Morgan Group provides culturally responsive consultation and training services to academic institutions, corporations, and the non-profit sector.

Dr. Taylor is a wife, mother, educator and speaker who has special interests in women's mental health issues, multiculturalism, life transitions, identity, intergenerational trauma, social justice, interpersonal relationship conflict, anxiety, and depression. She is well versed in both individual and group therapeutic services. Dr. Taylor's therapeutic style is integrative, as she utilizes evidence-based interventions such as psychodynamic, cognitive-behavioral, and developmental approaches to assist her clients in exploring what is bringing them into treatment.

For over ten years, Dr. Taylor has explored the field of psychology in theory and in practice. Dr. Taylor received a Master of Arts degree in Clinical Psychology from The Chicago School of Professional Psychology, Washington D.C. and a Bachelor of Arts degree in Psychology with a minor in Educational Studies from Michigan State University. In clinical practice, Dr. Taylor has trained in various settings such as Henry Ford behavioral health inpatient unit, University of Detroit Mercy Psychology Clinic, Third Circuit Court-Clinic for Child Study, Michigan State University Counseling and Psychiatric Services, Hope Network Insight Behavioral Health Center, non-profit youth home, and K-12 school settings. For four years, she served as the president of the J.E.W.E.L.S organization where she co-developed programs focused on the emotional, physical, and spiritual growth of young girls ages 6-18.

Dr. Taylor has received an honorable mention from the APA Minority Fellowship Program, earned the Division 39 Research Scholar Award, and was invited to present her research on women and identity development at three conventions hosted by the American Psychological Association (APA) in New Orleans, Louisiana; San Francisco, California; and Washington, DC. Dr. Taylor's extensive education and professional experiences have contributed to her long-term goal of conducting clinical research and passion for providing counseling services. She has a mission of focusing on the distinct experiences of African American women across the lifespan with mental health issues and translating her research into implications for practice.
